

OVATION GIVEN T. R. IN COURT

Former President Holds Center of Stage at Riggs Bank Officials' Trial.

PRAISES C. C. GLOVER

Raises Laugh by Statement That Banker "Was Against Me in 1912." Here Four Hours.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt, former President and candidate for G. O. P. nomination, was a witness in Criminal Court No. 1, at City Hall yesterday, in the Riggs Bank officials' trial. Though the Colonel was on the stand but fifteen minutes, he upset the procedure of that dignified building of justice.

File clerks in the basement, stenographers on the top floor and others of the Supreme Court's clerical staff on floors intervening, left their work and competed for standing room with the influx of spectators from the outside.

The Colonel's arrival was admirably staged. Court was to open at 10 o'clock. At four minutes of the hour, the jurors filed in. They were barely seated when the former President was announced by a commotion outside the court room. The spectators, crowding the benches and packed in the standing space, cheered and loud greetings.

Bows to Spectators.

The Colonel seated himself, but so prolonged was the applause that he arose and bowed at intervals. Then Justice Siddons arrived and quiet was restored.

Mr. Roosevelt was called to the stand first. He bowed to Justice Siddons, who returned the salutation. Clerk McKee then held the stage as he pronounced the oath to Mr. Roosevelt.

To the first question, Col. Roosevelt replied his residence was in Oyster Bay and his occupation a writer. Then, under examination by Attorney John B. Stanchfield, for the defense, he told of his friendship with Charles C. Glover, for whom he had come to testify as to character in the latter's trial, with the two Flatner brothers, for alleged perjury.

Col. Roosevelt spent fifteen minutes on the stand. He used many adjectives in his testimony, all of them going to the credit of the defendant, Mr. Glover. He returned to his seat, but only for a moment.

To the bowing of the jury and a commotion such that the trial was suspended. Mr. Roosevelt left the court, with a quarter of the spectators following him, but so great was the applause of admirers on the outside that the resumption of court was interrupted.

Breakfasts With Daughter.

Mr. Roosevelt arrived here yesterday at 7 o'clock and breakfasted at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth. He left on the 11 o'clock train, after a drive about the Mall.

United States Attorney Laskey, the chief prosecutor of the accused bankers, twice objected to answers of the former President and the line of questioning put the witness by Attorney Stanchfield. He did not approve of Mr. Roosevelt's "going into personal confidences with Mr. Glover," and objected to Attorney Stanchfield's question as to what the tenth president and the then President of the United States discussed about public affairs of Washington. Both his objections were sustained by Justice Siddons.

Just once did Colonel Roosevelt essay to turn a query into a laugh. In elaborating upon a question, he said he did not have much political talk with Mr. Glover, but that he "understood in 1912 he was for either Mr. Wilson or Mr. Taft. I knew he was against me." Whereupon, the spectators laughed and the court clerk knocked for order.

Praises Accused Officials.

Mr. Roosevelt expressed the highest praise of Mr. Glover, and W. J. Flatner and H. H. Flatner, the other two defendants in the trial.

Other witnesses as to the character of Mr. Glover, following Mr. Roosevelt on the stand, were Senator Oscar Underwood, Senator Newlands, Charles D. Walcott, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution; Henry White, former Ambassador to France; Robert C. Howard, insurance agent; William S. Corby, baker; Gen. John M. Wilson, and Rudolph Kaufmann.

Following the character witnesses, Owen T. Reeves, president of the Drovers' National Bank, of Chicago, and a former bank examiner frequently who had examined the Riggs Bank books, was recalled to the stand. During the afternoon session the jury was excused while Attorney Hogan, of counsel for the defense, read correspondence between the bank and Comptroller of the Currency, including the incumbent, John Skelton Williams.

New Painted Tin Flower Pots and Jardinieres Combined, of a Patented Design

These are new and only to be had of us in Washington.

Tin, painted in various plain colors and decorated in a contrasting stenciled design—white with black decorations, etc. They are copies of very expensive Japanese lacquered and other wares.

Patented design consists of a bottom through which water is poured by spout at side and is absorbed by the plant through perforations, thus letting the plant and earth take just the amount of water required.

8-inch size, 75c each.
9-inch size, $1.00 each.
10-inch size, $1.25.

Fifth floor, G street.
